The wise ones know that the world is a continuum; all things are a part of what has gone before and a part of what will come after. This picture means quite a lot; it is more than a collection of faces. This picture represents the people who have come to Norfolk Academy and left with a faith in the school that never diminishes — a faith strong enough to entrust their children to the same experiences they underwent. As Norfolk Academy celebrates its 250th anniversary, what better way to begin this pictorial representation of the years 1977-1978 than with a special acknowledgement of those who have gone before us in the continuum of life?

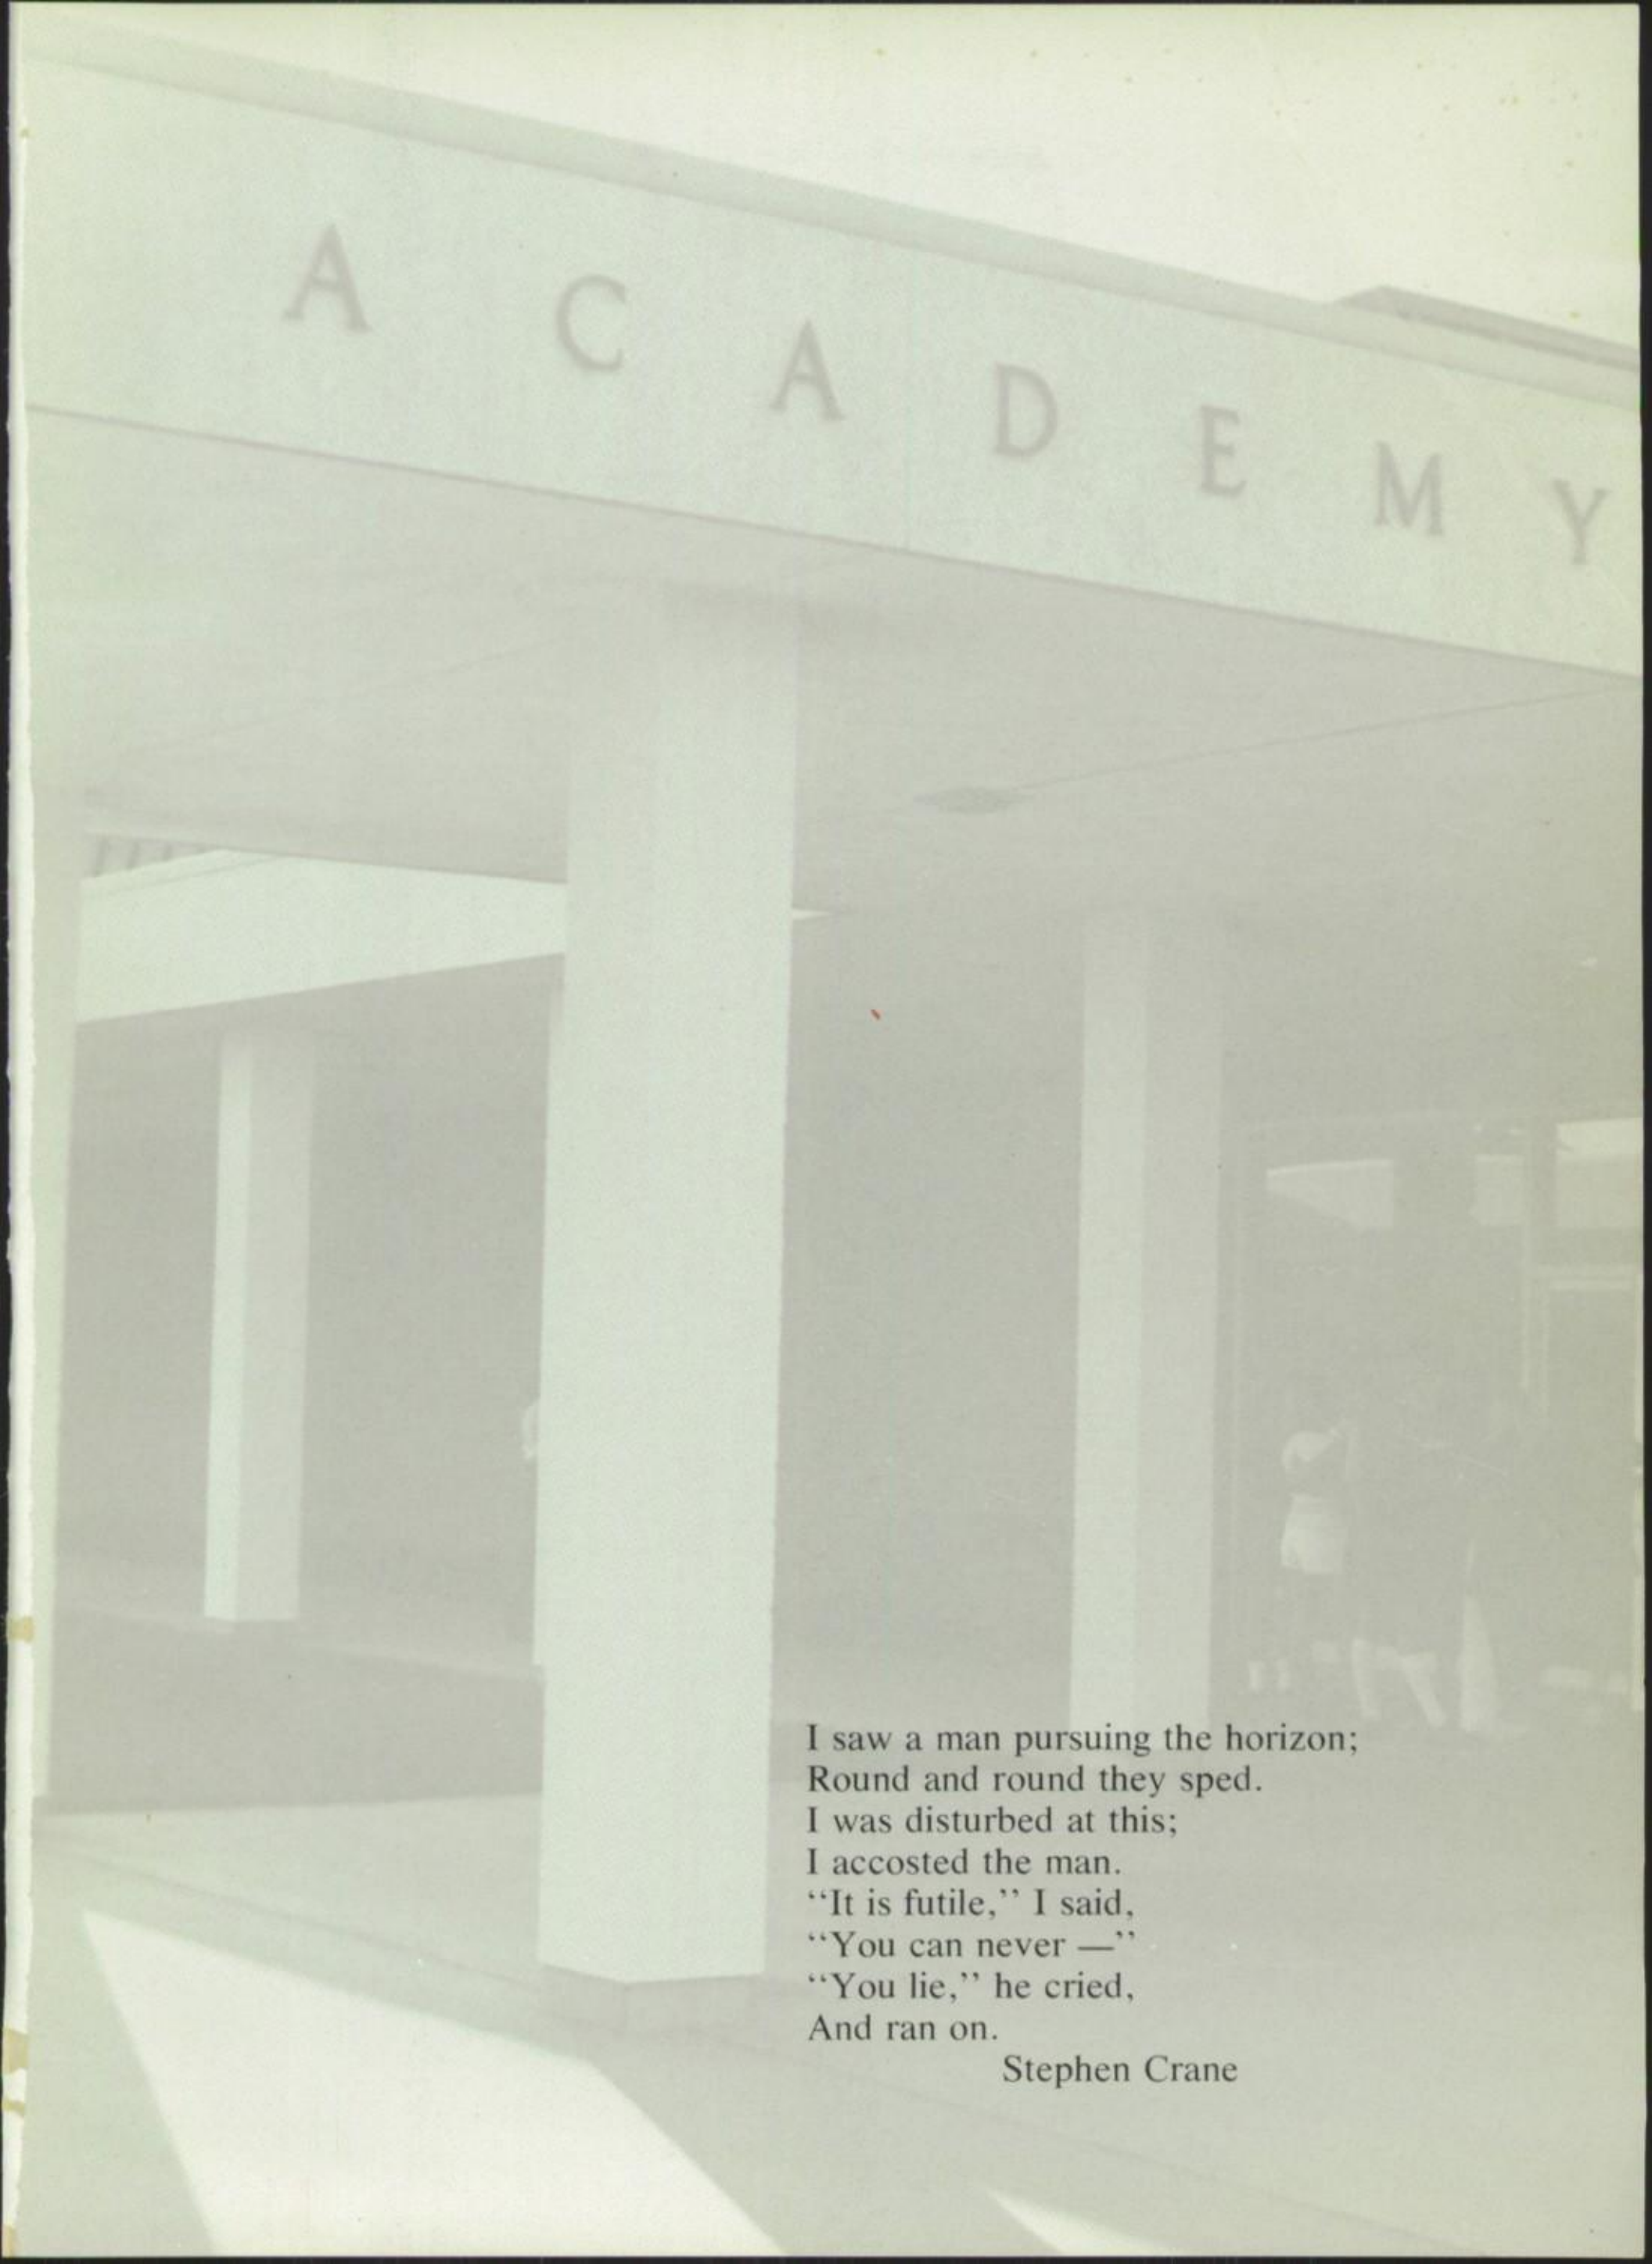

Latane,

To a hilarious friend!

I'll never forget all the experiences we've had together. I hope you leg will heal very soon! I will ~~write~~ you over soon! I hope to see you soon (over the summer) stay the same!

Love,

Dee Dee

ACADEMY

I saw a man pursuing the horizon;
Round and round they sped.
I was disturbed at this;
I accosted the man.
"It is futile," I said,
"You can never —"
"You lie," he cried,
And ran on.

FACULTY AND ADMINISTRATION

Aims and Ideals of Norfolk Academy

The immediate need of our educational system is for schools that provide for the spiritual, moral, and social well-being of the pupil equally with the cultural, thus recognizing on the one hand that the development of the intellectual side alone falls far short of affording a well-rounded education, and, on the other, that training along merely vocational lines is utterly inadequate. A rigid system that tends to smother individuality and initiative fails to develop the best type of manhood, and educators and sociologists emphasize the importance of cultural foundations and character building in the schools of the nation.

The curriculum of the Norfolk Academy seeks to meet this need in the fullest possible measure without impairing the practical adequacy of the instruction. It is proposed that its graduates shall be scholars and gentlemen with a cultural equipment that will enable them not only to take up whatever high branches of education may be selected, but to play useful parts in civic life.

Excerpt from Norfolk Academy
Brochure of 1926-1927

JAMES B. MASSEY, JR.

The name, James B. Massey, Jr., not only demands respect but justly deserves it. Throughout his years of experience within the academic community, Mr. Massey has inspired both teachers and students with standards not easily met, but, once achieved, greatly appreciated. His wisdom has guided both teachers and students so that teachers find themselves on a surer course and students discover the opportunities that lie ahead. The Norfolk Academy has not only benefitted from his wisdom but also grown because of it.

Beneath each hat exists a separate experience, a distinct thought. With or without the hat, Mr. Massey can dispense guidance as well as administrative knowhow, both of which allow the Academy to function. Mr. Massey gives us the benefit of his years in addition to his profit from countless experiences. The Academy works as a unit to achieve a common goal — the solid and continuing education of its students. Teachers and students of various backgrounds and personalities are united as a result of the perseverance and determination of this one man.

When those associated with the Academy celebrate its 250th anniversary, they must not merely give respect to an institution older than the country in which it was founded, but also honor the man who has given of his life to mold such a school.

CLASS OF 1978

The direction of Norfolk Academy has always been toward the complete education of its students. In 1913, this meant that graduates "shall be scholars and gentlemen with a cultural equipment that will enable them not only to take up whatever higher branches of education may be selected but also to play useful parts in civic life;" 1978's goals are not any different, for "the primary aim (of the school) is to prepare graduates for the ultimate responsibilities of a useful life." The administration realizes the development of the intellect alone cannot achieve this objective. The Norfolk Academy student, therefore, is prepared socially and morally, as well as academically, for his future. Self-improvement is the school's main responsibility; to achieve this, the Academy has grown with the community, incorporating many changes along the way yet always retaining its traditional standards of excellence. The direction is always toward bettering the school, maintaining Norfolk Academy as an institution that can promise its future students the same quality education offered in the past.

Just as Magellan and Balboa explored the vast unknown that challenged their curiosities, so students and faculty at the Norfolk Academy explore the many possibilities and ideas that the world of education offers. Since the school's beginnings, the faculty has continuously investigated various teaching methods and synthesized their findings to insure maximum quality in each academic discipline. To explore is to seek — in preparing the student for life, the Academy seeks to develop his mental faculties, his physical abilities, and his spiritual strength with the ultimate goal of producing navigators for the future. Thus, through the omnipresent search, the continuous exploration, the student, as well as the teacher, acquires knowledge and wisdom, the fruits of life.

In recent times the term tradition has developed a negative connotation, especially in the field of education where it is often equated with stubborn immobility, sterile objectivity, and pathetic antiquity. This is not always the case, however, for tradition is the foundation upon which rests Norfolk Academy's firm belief in the nature of a strong ethical and moral education. The cornerstone of this foundation is a commitment to the ideal of honor in all situations and interactions. The implementation of a student-controlled honor court, one instance of the Academy's dedication to making honor a viable force in the life of each student, is a fine example of present-day efforts to build upon the sound heritage of past traditions, for as the 1926 school prospectus states: "The first and highest aim (of the school) is to develop to the fullest extent a spirit of honor . . . so that it may easily become a working principle in the life of the pupil."

Harriers Run Over Foes

by CHUCK McPHILLIPS

In my opening treatise on the psychological fitness of N.A.'s Cross Country participants, I intimated that many of the harriers were, well, weird. I mean no obloquy; my point is simply that running Cross Country is like jumping off a cliff: you know it's absolutely insane, but once you start you can hardly stop.

After all, this sport has been defined as masochism at its mostest. In basketball you are cruisin' for a bruise; in football you are shakin' for a breakin'; but in Cross Country you are harryin' for a buryin'.

N. A. Plans 250th Celebration

by CARLA LINDEMANN

For many months Mr. Michael J. Pratt, director of the Middle School, has been planning for an unprecedented event in Norfolk Academy's history: its 250th anniversary. Commencing on January 22, 1978 with a program-packed convocation in the Convention Hall of Norfolk's Scope, the anniversary celebration will include a series of major events throughout the school year until its conclusion in December, 1978.

The opening convocation will feature Dr. Emerson Johnson, headmaster of other types of presentations. The Lower School will recreate the history of schools before and after the Revolution. The Middle School will display the history of Norfolk Academy from Civil War times through the Country Day School. The Upper School will hold many of the lectures and debates planned for the day.

On March 1, 1978, an Anniversary Lecture will be held at the Century Theater. Its main speaker will be Dr. Douglas Heath of Haverford College in Haverford, Pennsylvania. Dr. Heath is well known for several pi

KEY CLUB

Given the inexhaustible energy of the membership and the visionary direction of the leadership, the Key Club could not help but heed the call of service. The members' exertions included operation of the coke and fruit juice franchises, sponsorship of foreign children, sale of basketball programs for King's Daughters, organization of a paper drive for the Salvation Army, painting of the S.P.C.A. and Academy's track, and participation in a number of other school activities.

SERVICE

ADMINISTRATIVE

KEYETTES

The Keyettes, the liberated women's Key Club, did so much this year that it might be a simplification to say they did everything. Latane Ware presided over the ceaseless activities, which included regular visits to the Shore Drive Convalescent Home, contributions to the Social Service Bureau and the Heart Fund, selling nabs, and donations of scholarly volumes to the library. To paraphrase Adam Smith, there was quite a demand for the good of their services.

AIDES

Seniors who agree to become AA's provide an invaluable service to the school. They proctor study halls, grade tests, tutor those in academic difficulty, and do anything else they can to make the Academy run more smoothly.

VICE

ROYSTER OFFICERS

Under the guidance of Mr. Pratt and the leadership of these four students, the Royster Student Council maintained a constant flurry of activity. In the fall the SCA sponsored a successful dance; they plan a repeat performance for April. Halloween Dress-Up Day, Blue and Orange Day and many other events also owe their existence to this group, small in number but large in the performance of their duties.

HONOR COURT

COORDINATING COMMITTEE

Consisting mainly of representatives from the groups shown strewn among this section's pages, the Coordinating Committee executes the function its name suggests: to coordinate the disparate goings-on within the school's organizations. Veep Stephanie Adler, presiding over the C.C. meetings, not only provided leadership, but also exuded enthusiasm. As a result, such happenings as the Homecoming Cookout, the Blue Grass Festival, and the Valentine Queen competition were all given rave reviews.

TUNSTALL STUDENT COUNCIL OFFICERS

Thanks to the light of leadership shown by the female foursome that compose the executive branch of the SCA, the TSC fulfilled its duty to represent the views of the student body. The TSC committed itself to giving a school seal to commemorate the 250th anniversary. Most importantly, the TSC decriminalized clogs.

PERFORM

Mrs. Becker conducted this instrumental troupe, and as a result the talented Academicians pictured below produced a rarely achieved strain of sound. They provided thoroughly enjoyable entertainment at the Christmas and Spring Concerts, and they combined with friends of the Academy to form an inspired Convocation orchestra.

COMBO

Academy boasts two fine vocal groups, the Concert Chorus and the Combo. The Combo, a collection of lyrical ladies, treated the body academe to sweet song and pleasant melody. It performed occasionally at Chapel period and also rendered its vocals at events such as the Spring Concert.

As for the Chorus, they too graced the stage at several special events. Mrs. Mottola took over from the departed Mr. Archer at mid-year, and this group provided a bevy of meritorious melody.

ATHLETICS

Competition is a vital part of the educational process; learning how to win honorably, compete fairly, and lose gracefully are essential components of life. Norfolk Academy, throughout its long history, has never neglected this aspect of a student's development. From its beginning in 1891, Field Day has provided opportunities for athletic competition. This tradition is still alive today in a diverse program of intramural and interscholastic sports. As Field Day has grown in scope, so too has the range of athletic activities. Headmaster Robert Tunstall expanded the 1900 program from one sport, rugby, to include football, baseball, tennis, fencing, and track. Today, ten different programs are offered at the varsity level. Realizing the value of competition in a child's development, the school strongly encourages each student to participate in athletic competitions, a major part of the daily life at Norfolk Academy.

FOUNDED 1728

Throughout the years, students have combined imagination with ability to brighten the cultural life of Norfolk Academy. The Dance, Art, Music, and Drama programs have been channels through which the students demonstrated their talents, skills, and creativity. Country Day School saw the artistic potential of its students and quickly put it to use. Combining their musical skills with their imagination, the girls took part in off-campus study programs at various professional studios. Today, the musical program at the Academy provides interested students with choral and instrumental instruction right here on campus. Mrs. Virginia Bell, the mainstay of the school's art program for over two decades, provides her students with the necessary freedom, instruction, and guidance so that their imaginations can soar to new artistic heights. Each fall and spring, the NA Players present outstanding dramatic productions of unquestionable merit. With these outlets for imagination, Norfolk Academy is and always will be a leader in the performing and cultural arts.

Norfolk Academy's celebration of its two hundred and fiftieth anniversary brought together the educators, alumni, trustees, parents, and students of today, evoking nostalgia and instilling pride in all those present. Speakers representing almost every facet of the Academy's existence recounted the history of the school and speculated about the future; the consensus was that the Academy has steadfastly traveled the proverbial long and hard road in pursuit of a not-so-elusive excellence.

Innovation, although not a driving force in the history of Norfolk Academy, has become in recent years a vital part of the school's operation. The Academy's merger with the Country Day School in 1966 brought a new dimension to school activities with the addition of the female perspective. Experimentation with open classrooms in the primary grades has created new educational opportunities and allowed for a freer exchange between teacher and student. In the upper grades, seniors are offered a diverse selection of English courses, and a heavy emphasis is placed on the fine arts and dual language study for all students. Innovative in origin and design, the German and British exchange programs foster global communication and cooperation, a concept enforced through the Academy's participation in the Model UN program. Through innovation and the fostering of new ideas, the Academy continues in its pursuit of excellence.

DIRECTORY

With the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Norfolk Academy, we have examined our past and now turn toward the future, anticipating the broadening of our cultural and educational horizons. We have learned from the past and can face the future, confident that our expectations will not fall short of our goals. Often institutions with long histories find it necessary to sacrifice expansion for the sake of tradition; the Norfolk Academy, however, concerned with the community in general and the students in particular, recognizes the need to grow and adapt to various situations. The sentiments expressed during the 1924 cornerstone ceremony aptly capture the spirit of the present Norfolk Academy:

Still further beyond we see visions and dream dreams. Very reverently do we pray that this venerable institution may continue to serve the common good of this community and the generations that are yet to come.

The Academy, constantly envisioning ways to improve and expand, continues its tradition of excellence in order to meet its expectations for future success.

ADVER- TISEMENTS

The Norfolk Academy is one of the oldest educational institutions in America. The name first appears in the minutes of the Norfolk Borough meeting of March 26, 1787, while the first land site, a lot on Church Street across from St. Paul's Church, was set aside for educational purposes in 1728; from this date until 1762, the all-male student body met in the School Boy's Gallery of St. Paul's. In 1762, the first school building, known as the Grammar School, was built — it would last until 1776, when British fires burned down much of Norfolk. 1786 saw the construction of a two-story, four-room building that was to serve as the Academy's home for the next half a century, during which time the General Assembly granted incorporation status to the school, thereby vesting title and sole control in a Board of Trustees. In 1840, a new Norfolk Academy, modeled after the Temple of Theseus, was constructed, and except for a brief period during the Civil War, this building would be the home of NA students for the next seventy-five years. A variety of circumstances forced the temporary suspension of the school's academic programs until the early 1920's when land was purchased for a new building on Newport Avenue. On May 31, 1924, the cornerstone of the new Academy was laid; by 1950, the school had grown to include one hundred and twenty-seven students in grades four through twelve. The school moved to its present location in 1966, the same year that saw its merger with the Country Day School for Girls. Today, the student body includes almost one thousand pupils in grades one through twelve.

In 1924, Robert B. Tunstall noted that "we have hopes of expansion." These hopes have been realized, for the Academy has indeed grown and expanded since its early days as the School Boy's Gallery in St. Paul's Church.

THE DO-IT-YOURSELF KITCHEN KIT.

FREE WITH ONE CABINET OR A WHOLE ROOM FULL.

If you want cabinets and counter tops and you want to install them yourself, we'll make it easy for you.

All you need are some tools you probably already have. Some good advice (free of charge). And if you're not too experienced, maybe a bandaid (also free of charge).

You won't have to worry about finding the right cabinet either. We have three basic wood styles, including the IXL Shenandoah shown, right here in stock. So you can come by in the morning, make your choices, and more than likely, install your cabinets the same day.

If you're not all that handy, we'll do the installation for you (not free of charge).

But doing it yourself is really so easy, you probably won't even need the bandaid. It's there because we figure it's always a good idea to be prepared.

And good ideas—by the thousands—are what you'll find we offer here, and that's a promise.

CHEAP CHARLIE

A Beloved Person From The Academy's Past

CHEAP CHARLIE
Ready for the recess Rush.

Probably one of the first things that a visitor to the Norfolk Academy would see upon his arrival would be an old, white-haired man of about sixty-five years, seated upon a wooden horse at the entrance to the campus. Before him, in baskets and various other receptacles, are peanuts, buns, candy, sandwiches, lemonade, and all the vile things known to the "innards" of a school boy. "Cheap Charlie" has been an institution at the Academy for twenty-five years and has seen the school life of many a boy who has since become a prosperous and influential man.

At the age of fifteen, Charlie was a seaman aboard an American trading schooner; for twenty-five years he crewed on many different vessels, visiting nearly every major port in the world. After one especially fruitless voyage, Charlie found himself in Norfolk with no work and barely enough money to last a week. One day as he was walking about town, he noticed the boys playing in the Academy lot during recess, and the idea struck him that he might be able to make a little money selling them candy and buns until he could get a better job. After the first day, he had cleared $1.75. This was much better than he had expected, and he decided to continue the enterprise as long as it paid.

Charlie, now a white-haired, rheumatic man with a great store of banter and wit, is one person that the hundred and sixty boys at the Academy always owe. He keeps no books and sends no bills, but whether a student owes one cent or a dollar, he can always tell the exact amount outstanding. The boys have a way of badgering Charlie to trust them for two cents worth of peanuts or a glass of lemonade, and his "Trus' yuh nothin'," may be heard all over the Academy grounds.

And so it goes every day, week in, week out, the boys trying to con Charlie. When these same boys have attained years of wisdom and discretion, they look back upon their school days and realize what a fine character "Cheap Charlie" really was.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

As the 1978 Horizons comes to a close, what better way to end than to pay a final tribute to the man responsible for the past successes of Norfolk Academy. When Mr. Massey departs, he will leave behind a rich legacy from which all those who come to the school in later years can draw. The Massey spirit will thus remain a viable force to guide Norfolk Academy forward in its pursuit of excellence.

The staff of the Horizons gratefully acknowledges Mrs. Clara B. Gurkin, who typed the Directory; Mr. Frank Dixon, representing School Pictures Incorporated, who took faculty, senior class, organization, and convocation pictures; the Royster Photography Club, which contributed candid photos of the Middle School; and Mr. John G. Perry, representing Hunter Publishing Company, who advised and aided in this year's publication. We also express our appreciation to all those who advertise through the Horizons.

The wise ones know that the world is a continuum; all things are a part of what has gone before and a part of what will come after. This picture means quite a lot; it is more than a collection of faces. This picture represents the people who have come to Norfolk Academy and left with a faith in the school that never diminishes — a faith strong enough to entrust their children to the same experiences they underwent. As Norfolk Academy celebrates its 250th anniversary, what better way to begin this pictorial representation of the years 1977-1978 than with a special acknowledgement of those who have gone before us in the continuum of life?
